

Why repealing “Title II” is a bad idea

I support the existing "Title II" Net Neutrality rules, and strongly believe that we shouldn't meddle with it. I also strongly believe that if you guys repeal it with fraudulent actions against you guy, you're going to court, and there goes all of the money lobbied by ISPs just to pay you guys to do this. It'll affect small businesses and the reason why you'd go to court, is for fraud, and for promotion of identity theft in your arguments. I urge you guys to turn and look at the cons to repealing existing "Title II" rules. It would heavily outweigh the pros of repealing it. I urge you guys to vote against these fraudulent actions and stay out of court, because existing Net Neutrality rules protects small business owners from getting in the slow lane, and it ultimately protects American jobs. Most IT jobs will be lost due to the repeal of existing rules. The unemployment rate is going to skyrocket, since most people with disabilities have no choice but to work online, from home. It wouldn't make sense to repeal rules that protects small businesses and people who have made their passions into careers online. Online college students will be dramatically affected by these fast lane connections, because most online colleges are free and don't make much to afford the fast lanes. Schools that rely on internet to do basic class work will be greatly impacted by the repeal of "Title II," because internet will start getting unaffordable to those who can't afford to get in the fast lanes. They will probably fail class, because they didn't get their homework in on time. The dropout rate will start skyrocketing due to the amount of money that the internet is going to cost without "Title II" rules. Currently, we have access to all knowledge on the internet you could imagine. Please don't stifle human knowledge and drive a wedge between us to cause a digital divide.

“Title II” is what keeps us connected...

We have, for years, been using apps like Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, and etc... to stay connected, our troops have been connected with their families finally, because Internet is affordable to the families that need it. Skype is a wonderful tool to use to connect with your loved ones; imagine if AT&T blocked Skype, and some family who truly needed it to contact their hero overseas, could not do as such. That would break their heart, or even, worry them sick. Troops won't get to see their loved ones, babies, wives, husbands, any kind of family member they need to see. This is the future of the internet for you. Not being able to contact your troop overseas, because you need to pay out a $5 surcharge to contact overseas. We don't want that. We need consumer protections against this.

In conclusion, we need to look at the repercussions of what it would be like without consumer protections. The FTC won't have the power to police the internet thoroughly. I urge you to halt the repeal for our heroes overseas, don't allow Ajit Pai to mess us around. Please do the right thing. Oppose Ajit Pai's repeal of Net Neutrality. Please look towards the facts and stop looking at fraudulent claims. Please stop the repeal.
