

Public access TV has reliably provided a community platform for small towns and big cities across this nation. The FCC proposal to change valuations / lower valuations of Public access TV will greatly harm our communities and society. These public access TV facilities are a community lifeline, where local issues may be discussed freely and openly. Leave existing funding for Public access TV intact. Also extend the time for the public to respond. Having minimal public outreach and short comment periods days before Christmas predictably restricts public input due to holiday demands. Leave Public Access TV as it is, or provide greater funding and make it better.
