

To whom it may concern,

For several yrs I have been working as a WISP (Wireless Internet Service Provider). We are considered a last mile provider; but have slowly lost competitive areas. We receive zero government funding while competing against major Corporations such as AT&T, Comcast, Verizon, and Many others. Many times these companies refuse to service area's that WISP's are more than willing to at close to the same prices as the Large Corp's but on a much smaller budget and NO government funding. We are limited to the frequencies we can use with occasions arising that we have to remove equipment because government agencies and Public Utilities are using up spectrum that is unlicensed. Please, keep PAL Licensing Tracts small enough to be affordable for everyone and not just major business. This is the only spectrum available to us that the general public doesn't have easy access and Large Corporations haven't gobbled up.

Sincerely

Michael Polk
