Dear Mr. Hunt -

I am one of thousands of Americans who have been charged excessive phone rates at a hotel phone because I was not notified that the carrier was not my regular long distance carrier. I understand that a remedy has been proposed for this problem - called "billed party preference." I strongly support this concept and urge you to support it also. It's time to put a stop to phone rates triple and quadruple AT&T's rates -

Dear Chairman Hunt:

Based upon information provided to me by MCI Telecommunications Corporation, "billed party preference" appears to be a resolve to a problem I've experienced.

However, any supplemental details on "billed party preference" may assist me in understanding and dealing with the problem I'm experiencing until some more definitive action is taken to impliment "billed party preference".

Please, provide me with all available information as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

Felipe Rivera

Re: "Billed Party Preference"

Dear Mr. Hundt:

As a consumer who has experienced "phone burn" (i.e.: exorbitant credit card charges by a "look-alike"/"sound-alike" long distance carrier), please be advised I am in full support of the proposal "Billed Party Preference" I've recently heard about. There is a definite need for control of fraud, in this industry, on the local and national level.

The State of Illinois Attorney General and the Federal Communications Commission have been written, previously, regarding a specific complaint against "Zero Plus Dialing Incorporated" in Texas.

Thank you for the opportunity to express my feelings

Kind regards,

Shel Silver

Dear Mr. Hundt:

Our company employees are tired of getting jerked around by operator service companies that charge exorbitant fees and provide horrible service. I have heard much about billed party preference and how it could eliminate the problems and hassles that consumers are experiencing. The FCC should really do something about this situation and allow us to access good phone service at a fair price and not be held hostage by the hotel, motel, or airport where the calls are placed from.

I am looking forward to some big changes in this area of phone service.

Sincerely,
