I very strongly encourage the FCC to do one small thing for children -- make educational TV a quid pro quo for the incredible amount of money and influence broadcasters gain by using public airwaves.

Specifically, I think broadcasters should air an hour a day at times when children are likely to be watching (7am-10pm). The FCC should create a stronger definition of educational and ask that broadcasters use a special logo before such shows so that parents can find and identify the programs.

It is not too much to ask. It is common sense and is long overdue.

I feel that the current trend in TV broadcasting is full of mindless drivel and becoming more pornographic each year. It's not that I am a prude but I am tired of the sitcom norm of oversexed single kids living together. Responsible dults are always shown to be stupid, too restrictive or too fuddy-duddy. Religion and preachers are always laughed at or are the villians in some plot. The big three liberal news media never give us what is really going on, just sensationalizes non-important issues or whinning self-proclaimed victims. I do not know who they are polling for their pat-me-on-the-back coverages, but it sure is not any of my associates. Of course, what are guys going to do, knowing that your boss (Hillary) can pull your pension at any time.

It's all crap, promotes socialism, and does not encourage anybody to take responsibility for themselves. I cannot let any childeren watch a "family" special because the ads and promo for other shows are filled with smut and violence. Who wants thier kids to hear about safe sex during a Xmas story.

The first ammendment wasn't about sexual diversity and immoral perversion. It about freedom of religion and free speech for political immunity.

Anyway, you asked... Merry CHRISTmas.

PS..

1. We do not do cable or satellite stuff. If its free, we watch it. Therefore our selections are limited. We watch public TV more often as long as it does not promote homosexuals or evolutionary theology.

(by the the way, I am not some right-wing-extremist-nut case.. I am an Advisory Development Engineer in Computers, my wife and I both have degrees, we pay over $50,000 dollars in taxes/yr for services that we will never use or seem to have no say in - yea Clinton created 1 million more jobs, but I've got three of them).

2. Please help us teach kids true U.S. history, not politically-correct junk, virtue, honor, pride in our country, respect for all people, and to shun immorality in all its deceptive forms. -----

Mr. Chairman,

I think that your page on Myths was very interesting. I never thought about the idea that broadcasters are using the air-ways for free in exchange for serving the public. Maybe you should think about charging them money instead, since they aren't doing a very good job!
