FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION
OFFICE OF SECRETARY

Dear Federal Communications Commission,

I have heard that the major phone companies are petitioning the FCC to charge Internet users a fee, much like long distance, to use their telephone lines for all their on-line time.

As a tax-paying American citizen of voting age, I urge you to reconsider such a decision. The public interest is not served by this action. All it would do is line phone companies' already enormous pockets, and prevent competition.

Please, do not grant the phone companies' request to gouge consumers.

Thank you,

John E. Daley III
