

60000867939.txt

I live on a fixed income and cannot afford to pay more than I'm already paying for internet service. I use the internet to pay bills, to stay in touch with family members and for news and entertainment. The average person needs to be considered ahead of the big companies and congress members who's pockets are lined by these companies if changes to net neutrality occur.