The "new" E-rate program is a mere shell game of moving funding that our school district was receiving for necessary telephone services over to internal Internet connections for students. It is all for students anyway. What we need is more funding not new rules to follow. The Common Core curriculum requirements, that require a high computing device to student ratio, are so costly that our district is even more strapped for technology funding than before. Please add funding to the E-rate program. Holding it level is NOT a solution.
