

60000868925.txt

I am not capable of paying for the current "premium" plans for personal usage plans. I see no reason why the providing companies won't institute a peak period or geographical area rate increase. These policies existed for landlines and cell phones made people cancel or switch to the very companies now trying to hamper access. Rather than lower their executive salaries and other upper level expenditures and use that money to build the next couple decades worth of infrastructure, (as AT