Thank you for adding RFDTV to the ATT lineup. Urban Americans NEED to know what is going on in the rural production communities.

Knowing how other countries and their buying or not buying products from the United States will impact prices is invaluable information--whether they pay attention or no. I used to be connected to the farming and ranching community and was very interested in farming and ranching news but since I am 72 and everyone else was older you must know that those people are not around to call and talk with anymore.

Please keep this program in the mainstream so hopefully younger generations will begin to realize the world is more than games and social media.
