First off fuck Comcast. It is one of the most evil companies on the face of this planet and fuck you for giving them anymore power than they already have. Millions of Americans already have to deal with the ridiculously low services they provide, and their unwillingness to let you off their services no matter how many times you call. The cable/internet provider monopoly which the US government has allowed to persist is anti american and is a testament to how selfish and corrupt our government system is. The web should be a place for anyone to share their ideas, and if world dominating companies like Google and Amazon are telling you that then you should probably fucking listen. This should not even be a question, and it wouldn't be if the government cared in the slightest what the american people want (representative republic? HA!) I want to be able to make my own choices, if I wanted the government or corporations whom have the government in their pocket, to dictate what information I am given I would move to fucking communist China. Seriously get it together FCC, and listen to what is best for America. This isn't an opinion. It is fact. The only people who don't see it that way are the blood sucking corporations who give you blow jobs all day so you do what they want.
