Internet accessibility is one of the most essential tools that every socioeconomic class in America must have access to, it significantly adds to the quality of life through information gathering, communication capability, and certainly as a learning instrument in educational arenas. The open internet and net neutrality must remain apart from corporate interests and if this agency is to truly protect the citizens access to this vital 21st century instrument it must not be swayed by the money and lawyers and sly methods that will be employed to render the internet so that only some people have access to, or at least speedy access as the corporation will sell this idea as reasonable. As a nation we must not allow industrial neoliberal agendas to manage our base of open international intelligence accessibility.
