

60000974265.txt

This country is at risk of financial disaster because of its refusal to think systemically. We become more fragile every time we make rules to shore up big business. Innovation is squelched, making room for other countries to surpass us economically. The gap grows between the haves and have-nots, which means the customers for those corporations have less money to spend, and then those corporations ask government for more rules to ensure their continued dominance. We have the most short-sighted government in the history of this country. Do not allow a two-tiered internet. The consequences for the system will be huge.