

60000974308.txt

KIRO TV out of Seattle is applying for a new license. Over the past six months we have noticed that our over-the-air reception of that channel has been steadily getting weaker. Is there a reason for this? We have been using an antenna for years and have not had a problem with reception up until this year. The other over-the-air stations don't seem to be affected like KIRO. Is there a way to look into this matter from the FCC standpoint?