

60000982100.txt

Enough profit is already available to those who own the "pipes" without those owners also making a profit on what can be carried. The folks who own the local monopolies on delivering internet content have proven they do not want to give us a first-class utility. The speed, reliability and security of the internet can only degrade if they are not properly regulated. Common carrier classification, a neutral internet, is better for a free-enterprise system.