

60000983384.txt

The current net neutrality regulations should remain in effect. The proposed changes will hurt every citizen's freedom to information and allows internet providers to become dictators over information. Laws are in place to make people (and corporations who do not have the status of people) do the right thing. Net neutrality is the right thing. Furthermore, the telecommunication monopolies that the FCC have allowed should be broken. The FCC has already failed at effectively regulating internet providers and if net neutrality rules are abandoned, it will show unethical behavior is what gets rewarded.