

60000986281.txt

Sirs: I urge you to enact strict net neutrality. To allow certain providers to purchase faster speeds will tend to discourage new entrants and to cement the position of the existing major providers. The large telecommunications companies are already either monopolies or oligopolies, and this naturally results in the stifling of innovation, higher prices, and poor customer service.