For us to have government of the people, by the people, and for the people, as intended by the founders of this nation, all government agencies must regulate fairly and objectively, favoring no one and disadvantaging no one.

All Internet traffic should be treated the same, fairly and neutrally. "Fast Lanes" on the Internet would give an unfair advantage to wealthy corporations, and that will disfavor innovation and entrepreneurship.

The Internet now is a place where all people (and even all corporations) have an equal voice and opportunity. Forcing some to pay a premium to spread their content limits freedom of speech. As such, it would probably have to go to the Supreme Court as a constitutional issue.

The Internet is not broken now -- don't try to "fix" it!
