

60001002545.txt

The proposed Comcast - Time Warner merger is a bad idea, not only because it will reduce consumers' options in the short term but also because in the long run the American communications market will suffer from the lack of competition this deal would engender. Unless the FCC desires reduced innovation and curtailed freedom in the market, they would be abject failures as public servants to allow this to occur. I strongly urge them to block this merger.