As a person using a cell phone who does not have a home phone, it is really scary to think that if I called 911 and couldn't stay on the line for some reason to give my location, emergency services couldn't find me until after I was dead. And I have an LG with GPS set on it permanently because I want to be able to be located, but it could be as much as a mile off, and was the last time I misplaced my phone and went to the Sprint office to use the locator service to find it. Please require cell phone companies to make their locators accurate so people like me aren't dead by the time they're located. Thank you.
