To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing in support of the FCC's proposed rule(s) on wireless 9-1-1 location instead of the rules being proposed by wireless carriers. I have reviewed the differences between the FCC's proposed rule(s) on wireless 9-1-1 location and the proposal backed by wireless carriers (details of both as provided by FindMe911.org) and I find the FCC's proposal superior in many ways to that of wireless carriers. For one thing, it would concern me if our nation's citizens had to depend upon a satellite system run by the Russian military, which as I understand it would be the case under the proposal of wireless carriers! At best, that doesn't seem dependable (which could put the lives of individual Americans at risk) and at worst that seems to have negative national -security implications.

Sincerely,

Alona Mendoza
