

In the Matter of Preserving the Open Internet Broadband Industry Practices

My position:

I want absolute Net Neutrality, no "fast lanes" - that is, telecom's may charge different rates for different bandwidths, but should NOT be allowed to make additional charges based on what or who you're connecting with. That's all a "fast lane" really is - a surcharge because you're using your bandwidth to connect to NetFlix - that you wouldn't pay if you were using the same bandwidth to connect to something less popular.
