My wife and I have dropped our land line because of the endless interruptions of the offending robo and marketing calls. The call blocking devices and reporting of offenders grew ineffective with the growth of number spoofing by the offenders. We are now getting the same calls on our cell phones. We cannot practically block spoofed numbers due to business use. We strongly encourage the FCC to fix this problem. If a premium service is not the answer perhaps registering and licensing marketing operations is. Offending operation and un l'd numbers could be auto blocked, with exceptions perhaps a registered class for law enforcement and medical
