I support net neutrality. The internet should be a fairly level playing field for EVERYONE. Let's keep it fair for everyone. Many other countries have low internet costs with higher speeds than what is offered in America, simply because corporations like Comcast and Time Warner are filled with greed. These companies are already making more than enough money and are just riddling the system with problems (constantly throttling people's connections). Cut the nonsense out. All data should be treated equally. Let's continue allowing start-ups to have a fair chance instead of being pushed to the side just because of a lack of money. Let PEOPLE decide what data is most important to them. Don't let Comcast bully other companies and individuals just for their own greed and lack of real contribution to society.
