

This request by Marriott and the hotel industry should be denied. They should not be allowed to deny me service that I have already paid for.

If this argument is excepted, it could open the door to other industries claiming to "safeguard" people's wireless technology by cutting them off. They could make the argument that being connected to the internet via cellular network opens consumers up to viruses. Under that argument, the hotels could try to block cellular internet as well.

This is clearly an attempt by a greedy into street to grab more cash.
