I am alarmed that the Commission is even considering allowing a private business that has already been fined for violating a rule, to now simply try to get that rule changed to allow them to profit from using intentional interference of public frequencies. More often than not, when I have traveled to places where I needed to use my own internet connection via my MiFi, it has not been to simply avoid paying their outrageous fees, it has been because the service they are charging for is completely unacceptable, even if it was free. Also, in most cases where I have been strong armed into using their connection, I get warning messages that all of my communications and connections are not secure, therefore subject to being compromised by others on their same system. I already pay a fee to my wireless carrier for service to my own MiFi device. To allow a private business to intentionally block the use of my paid service in order to profit is simply outrageous, let alone an extreme violation of the principles set forth by this very commissions own rules and mandated objectives.
