

Dear Senator Cornyn,

My name is John Bily and I am writing you about the upcoming FCC ruling on Net Neutrality. I am for an open internet, where connections are not controlled by a handful of powerful telecommunications corporations. I am for the internet being labeled as a Title II Common Carrier. I am for raising minimum speed requirements on broadband internet.

I am against any FCC ruling, or legislative action, that gives more power to a handful of telecommunications corporations to manage the internet. I am against "internet fast lanes". I am against the spending of my tax dollars to help these major telecommunications companies.

If the FCC rules to allow internet fast lanes, and gives more power to telecommunications companies, the American public will suffer. Further allowing these companies to maintain their monopoly on T.V, Internet, and phone, hinders the ability of startup companies, and small business owners, to flourish.

The United States government is in place to protect citizens and to allow them to prosper. It is not in place to protect the business interests of wealthy corporations.

Thank you for your time,
John Bily III
