

60001013842.txt

The internet is awe-inspiring. It is truly magnificent in its ability to give the common man a voice and connect people/ideas in a an historically unprecedented way. If we give powerful profit-driven corporations the right to regulate the speed and intensity at which the people's voice gets to be heard, then the internet is no longer free and open. Chairman Wheeler, I implore you to embrace net neutrality not only with your statements but with your actions as well. Thank you.