I'm fed up with the bate and switch programs our cable companies are offering consumers. In our small subdivision of 15 over the yrs we've been rotating between U-verse, Direct tv and Comcast. I signed up for basic cable to include fox news and history channel. I watch no movies (theyre all from the nineties anyway) I do not pay to view. My bill this month? 220.00 Are you kidding? it has gone from an affordable 130 range to 220.00. They say my "introductory" period is over which I wasn't aware I had. I'd like to tell them where to put their introductory period but this is a public forum. NO ONE in our subdivision likes this bate and switch practice done by our cable companies. It's really unethical. But will anything be done about it? probably not.
