

I am extremely opposed to so-called “net neutrality”. It is a control grab effort by progressives on one of the only things left that is still free of government intrusion, all in the name of fairness. Plain and simple. The argument that the internet is “unfair” is a false argument and “net neutrality” will start out small, but like a cancer that is progressivism, it will open the door to more and more government control and intrusion down the road.
