

60001028894.txt

The internet has a self regulating mechanism that is far superior to any form of government regulation that can be implemented. That mechanism is the free economy. Anything that the FCC could come up with will only inhibit technological development and personal freedom. The good people of this country do not need federal, or any other, regulators making decisions for them. I therefore oppose your proposed regulation of the internet and hope that it never comes to fruition.