Dear Chairman Wheeler:

I do not support the so called "net neutrality" proposals put forward by the FCC.

I do not trust the federal governments in matters dealing with regulation. Only free market competition can offer American people the best choices for access to the internet at the best price and availability. This is nothing but another unneeded intrusion into the lives and businesses of the American people by the federal government to control free speech and commerce.

I also find it interesting that your commission is not releasing the proposed 332 pages long Net Neutrality plan until after the FCC has voted. This tells me that your commission has something to hide.

In the end the free market will always offer the best choice for consumers if given a chance.

Sincerely,

Paul Smith
