

I find it deplorable that companies that have been handed free reign to act as de facto monopolies continue to find new ways to fleece their hapless customers in order to increase their profit margins. When did a government founded on the principle of equality amongst all people regardless of any factor (including but not limited to money, power, or influence), stop caring about the common citizen. It is clear to anyone that these "Usage Based Pricing" schemes benefit consumers in no possible way. Squash these monopolies, support net neutrality, and ban these avaricious asinine pricing plans.
