Giving more power to cable companies is one of the worst ideas in the world. I pay for my internet 100 mbs if i go to watch netflix and suddenly my speed drops to 2 mbs because my IP is fighting with netflix im the one who suffers and im not getting what i paid for. I pay for netflix and i pay for my internet why should anything i want to do on there be held back because the place im going didnt pay my IP more money?

If i order a pizza to be delivered to my house but my local town didnt like papa johns and the police were made to pull over every papa johns car and hold them up for five minutes each time they saw one but not pizza hut because pizza hut paid i would be forced to go with something i dont like or be forced to have a cold pizza.

Destroying net neutrality only benefits the cable companies who already have too much power.

The governments roll in the internet should be to make sure it is open and free. If you take that away there will be a MASSIVE backlash from millions of mostly young voters.

They are the ones who dont vote very often but if you hit them hard on the thing they use most (the internet) you will see poll numbers that break records as almost everyone from 18-40 shows up to vote to kick all of those who supported this out of office.
