The freedom of the internet is the great equalizer. If it became a tiered system then the power and quite frankly the point of the internet would become castrated. The internet is the one place where a king and a pauper are on the same level. If the king can pay to work faster, then those that market to kings will become inaccessible to paupers and they will once again be separate. Our modern lives, for better or worse hinge on the internet. If corporations were able to actively withhold this key part of our lives then they hold sway over us. And in a country based so fundamentally on freedom of expression, this must not be tolerated.
