

Regulators should look into Comcast's blocking of HBO Go on Sony's PS4 as a Net Neutrality violation - they are only blocking it for business reasons because HBO GO has not agreed yet to pay extortion for Comcast to allow the service. Holding websites and services consumers want to use hostage (and thereby holding consumers using such services hostage) is unacceptable and illegal with Title II Net Neutrality. Also using data caps to undermine competing streaming services but exempting your own services from such caps is a Net Neutrality no-no (XFINITY TV vs Netflix).
