Re: Proceeding number: 14-127

I have operated small market radio for 54 years. In that entire time I have had only THREE requests to view the public file. TWO were college interns doing research on station public files. One was by a politician. Three community requests in 54 years.

Communications with other owners suggest the lack of the interest is not uncommon. It also reflects confidence by the public in our community service programs.

While additional record keeping data churn and transferred would be burdensome it also presents an onerous opportunity. Outside of overage area special interest groups could inspect and gather information to be used to influence local programming by threatening challenges to license renewal or badgering local ownership, by requiring a major legal defense which will create economic hardship further reducing locally responsive programing. At very least, Public file posted on the internet should be limited to large markets in a manner similar to EEO non filing at stations of five or less full-time employment.

Please be responsive to realistic data collection and dispersal to allow efficient and effective locally responsive radio.
