I am opposed to any plan to reallocate broadcast spectrum that would shrink or eliminate the spectrum currently allocated to broadcast TV. Free, Over the Air broadcast TV is one of the only checks right now on the Satellite/Cable oligopoly that been steadily driving up the price of access to information and entertainment. While the internet video options do appear to also challenge the traditional cable business, it is only an illusion, because the cable industry also controls most broadband internet access. As the number of people "cutting the cord" from the cable industry grows, the number who are discovering the quality and variety of programming found on broadcast TV is also growing - and the broadcasters are responding by increasing the amount of programming available on digital subchannels. All of this is threatened if the FCC attempts to reduce available broadcast spectrum. Please keep TV broadcasting vibrant and FREE.
Thank you.
