

60001046244.txt

In light of the proposals to shut down their network, typically coupled with the claims that traditional service is quickly losing customers that the phone companies have been soliciting, the FCC should be aware that discussions have been popping up about them actively refusing to accept new broadband orders.

<http://www.dslreports.com/forum/r29949598-Southeast-We-don-t-want-you>.

Considering phone services are frequently bundled and digital voice is aggressively targeted towards Uverse subscribers, this likely affects phone orders as well. If this irresponsible behavior is happening on a wide scale, these companies should be forced to sell off their networks.