Comment: Fraudulent emergency calls from NSI telephones are similar in nature to fraudulent emergency calls that were traditionally made from pay phones. Pay phones have traditionally allowed a user to dial 911 (and before that, dial the operator) without depositing coins or making a payment. The ability for people to legitimately summon emergency help for free has generally been seen as outweighing the cost of some prank calls.

There is a perception, usually by people who have ample financial resources themselves, that cellular plans are inexpensive enough that anyone can afford one and so therefore everyone should have a plan. This is not always the case. NSI cell phones are often carried by the most vulnerable members of our society such as battered women who leave an abusive partner and have little or no money and are given an NSI phone by a shelter.

This web form says that anonymous submissions are accepted and the required fields will subsequently populate with "Anonymous" but that doesn't seem to be the case. I am manually entering "Anonymous" instead.
