

60001048101.txt

Is it possible driverless cars will use broadband space as used by drones? Can somebody take over control of a car remotely, and drive it wherever they want? What spectrum space will be allotted to the signals from car "black boxes"? Will these black boxes installed in new cars be able to communicate among themselves and tell Homeland Security where everybody is going at any time?