

60001075742.txt

Singapore is planning to roll out 10Gbps broadband. This is 10,000 Mbps. Here at home I get 25 Mbps. What is the FCC planning to do to support something like what Singapore is doing? Why are we being pushed into the stone age, when Broadband should be a utility that is required for every household?