I hate to have to say this but the language use under this section I find very offensive and very in American, we have always had telecommunications operators that handled our telecommunications needs 24-7 so I'm really not getting what the regime formation is all about. I would however, like an explanation of exactly does the FCC mean by formation of a regime. This language I find to be very unAmerican and foreign in nature We have never used this type of language to describe unionization for a particular project. In this Country.
