

60001090852.txt

I support changes to FCC indecency standards because I believe in changing attitudes towards American discomfort with the body and language. If people were more comfortable with themselves and less rigid or confined by ideas of "purity" which has never existed on TV anyway, the world would be a more accepting place. TV standards can play a role in showing that different views and ideas, and bodies are acceptable rather than unspeakable.