

60001090858.txt

Internet providers already provide customers with a sub-standard service compared with much of the world. Not only is the US still running mostly on cable bandwidth speeds, but they're paying more for that slow speed than most other countries. Giving these companies who don't care about the customer more power to make more money is not right and not fair. Customers should be given a choice of internet providers in their cities, but that never happens. The internet needs to be free and equal for all. Thank you.