ATT has not proven able to provide technically sound digital products and customer support for those products. Internal corporate management structures are in shambles and unable to guarantee clarity of service level agreements and effective execution of a functional service. Look into some of the companies systemic digital problems, their email service offerings, for example. Their digital speed delivery issues. This is a company that is too big to succeed. Its lack of corporate governance puts American infrastructure at serious risk. This requested relationship and all the 'promises' by ATT should be discounted and denied.
