Please do NOT approve the AT&T and DirecTV merger. This provides no consumer benefit. It reduces the number of TV and video providers. Further, AT&T has not met their previous build-out obligations. They are charging premium prices for Internet access over old copper lines.

What was the purpose of breaking up the telephone monopoly in the past just to let them merge again and become even bigger?

If you can't be persuaded to change your mind, at least make the approval contingent upon actions instead of just promises. Require them to actually build out fiber and higher speed connections before the approval.

Require no data caps anywhere except in the case of congestion. And, when congestion occurs, upgrades must follow in a timely manner.
