

60001121563.txt

The Internet needs to be classified as a title II telecommunications service.

Treat it the same way you treat electricity, because people use it much the same way, and no one should be able to tell you how to use the electricity you pay for and no one should be able to make you pay a premium to use it the way that you want. What people do with the service they pay for is their business.