

60001123696.txt

More and more every day, we see local radio outlets closing down, or being bought out by mega corporations. Slowly we are witnessing the death of local radio. Mega corporation radio stations with programming created thousands of miles away, no longer give local news and information to their listener's. Where are the local High School sports, local remote broadcasts, local public interest stories? Some of these stations are not even manned after normal business hours, and are controlled thousands of miles away via the internet. What could save lives in New England, is of no interest in Florida, if they even understand what is happening. Radio today only survives because of the need to make money. No longer is it to provide a public service, or information. We need to bring radio back to its roots as a local service.

LPFM or even AM does this!

We need to remember that the airwaves are owned by the public, not the corporations!
BRING BACK LOCAL RADIO!