Comment: I believe we all have the right to make things we buy to work better or more appropriately to our needs. Would it be fair if I bought a chair with the prohibition of changing it's color? Besides, I think that, for example, losing the right to install new systems on devices would have an ecological impact: if my pc is not working as new, I could install a new system and continue using it for years. If it's locked, it will become technological trash immediately.
